

Young Money – Teacher Advisory Group

Terms of Reference

Overview

The Teacher Advisory Group (TAG) is a network of teachers who are passionate about the delivery of high-quality financial education to all young people. As part of the TAG this network of teachers will work collaboratively with Young Money to support the development of tools, resources, programmes, and services which enable teachers throughout the UK to deliver financial education to the young people they work with.

What would be my role within the Teacher Advisory Group?

Young Money operate a programme of continued development of all our support. It is important to us that we do this in consultation with teachers. This may involve being asked to review and feedback on new tools and resources we develop, providing views on the development of our programmes and services for teachers, and potentially feeding into financial education policy. The TAG will be the very first group of teachers to explore new materials and be able to provide input into their development prior to making them more widely available.

How do you select teachers to become part of TAG?

It is important to us that the support we provide is accessible to a wide range of teachers and other practitioners who support young people. As such we want to ensure that the TAG includes a diverse range of teachers who represent all four of the Home Nations; come from different subject specialisms; are at various stages of their teaching careers and who represent a range of educational phases. We collect this information via an expression of interest form and use this to invite teachers to join the TAG. The total number of teachers involved will be limited to around 50.

What commitment am I making?

We fully appreciate that teaching is your priority, and that there are times throughout an academic year which can be extremely challenging. The only commitment is one of good intention to provide support if your capacity allows. We plan to run three face-to-face TAG workshops each academic year. These will run during term time; the majority will be hosted virtually, and TAG members will be consulted about timings. TAG members will also be asked to complete short monthly surveys or polls sent via e-mail along with information and updates. There is no obligation to take part in every workshop or to complete every survey, but TAG members will need to meet a minimum threshold to gain their certificate of completion (see 'What's in it for me?' below).

What's in it for me?

We want the TAG to be mutually beneficial. Each TAG workshop will be an opportunity for you to network with other teachers with an interest in financial education; be the first to engage with new Young Enterprise resources and to have input into the development of offers. Members of the TAG who attend a minimum of two workshops and respond to at least four surveys will receive a Certificate of Completion at the end of one year's TAG service. TAG members who have engaged with the TAG in each preceding term will be given free access to newly released Lesson Plans from the Young Money Lesson Plan service, full access to which costs schools £95 per year. TAG members who have met the minimum certification requirements will also be invited to attend an additional workshop which will be accredited by The CPD Certification Service and could therefore be used as evidence of professional development.

What next?

The first step is to complete the online survey to provide us with some brief background information on yourself. This information will be used to ensure we achieve a diverse and representative TAG membership and to contact you with further information.
